RECOILtv: Gun Room – Forced Reset Trigger

By RECOILtv.

Do you want semi-full-auto capabilities in your rifle? How about full-semi-auto capabilities? Not really sure if those are actual phrases, but you get what we are saying. Check out what Rare Breed Triggers is doing to make your rig as close to fully automatic as you can be. Technically still a semi-auto rifle, when a platform adds one of these FRT-15 triggers to its inner workings, your rate of fire increases dramatically. It's the closest thing you can get to a full auto rate of fire, without crossing that proverbial line drawn in the sand by certain government bureaucracies. Follow RECOIL Editor in Chief, Iain Harrison, as he drops one of these bad boys into a lower, and pairs a couple different uppers to see how it performs. Be sure to check this out, and if you are interested, get your hands on one of your own...before a certain organization decides you can't have one!

For more information on the FRT-15, head on over to <https://rarebreedtriggers.com/>

Exhibit 13

The new Rare Breed Triggers (<https://www.rarebreedtriggers.com/>) FRT-15 trigger (<https://www.rarebreedtriggers.com/product/frt-15/>) for the AR platform allows very rapid semi-automatic fire from an AR-15 rifle. Watch the video above, which shows the trigger in action and explains how it works.

Rare Breed Triggers FRT - Full Video
from RARE BREED TRIGGERS

10:52

The TL;DR is that the FRT-15's sear forces the trigger to reset with every shot even if you keep continuous pressure on it. It cannot be considered anything but semi-automatic. Rare Breed notes that a heavy buffer and a full-auto bolt carrier group is required for use of the $380 FRT-15.

As I watched the video, when I got to the animated explanation of operation, all I could think was, "My God, they invented the bump (<http://zelmanpartisans.com/?p=4521>) trigger. ATF heads are going to explode." In a morbid way, I'm looking forward to seeing what creative linguistic (<https://bearbussjaeger.wordpress.com/2019/04/11/atf-volitional-vs-nonvolitional-movement/>) gymnastics (<https://bearbussjaeger.wordpress.com/2019/04/09/semi-auto-vs-full-auto/>) they concoct to ban this.

Without having tried the FRT-15 personally, two things strike me about it. First is that using that safely using FRT-15 is going to take some practice. This isn't for the amateur who's going to drop it in his AR, then leave it in the gun case for months.

The second point is something I hope rare Breed Triggers considered carefully. The contact area between sear and hammer appears to be small compared to a more convention trigger group. That's a potential point failure. If that wears too much, the rifle could go full auto.

I suspect heat treatment during manufacturing presented interesting challenges for the company. Too hard and the metal could fracture under stress.. Too soft and it wears too quickly.

If you buy one of these, I suggest inspecting those surfaces periodically.

Because Gun Control in any shape or form is rooted in racism and genocide that makes it a racist and nazi based agenda. Therefore the 1968 Gun Control Act should be ripped from the books. Instead of trying to justify his client's product the attorney should be asking Congress to justify what is a racist and nazi based agenda.

Tearing down statues, renaming everything to erase the long, long racist history of the democRat Party while one if the biggest symbols of racism and genocide gets a pass is ludicrous and despicable.

Make no mistake, the ATF will take a huge whopping shit all this product. Gargantuan steamy frothy shit. It will be coming – especially, if this product becomes popular.

The ATF aren't about stopping people that hurt others with guns or otherwise. They are about us. They are here to go after guns. End of story.

If the ATF can hand wave bump stocks into machine gun territory, which are NOT machine guns, AT ALL, then what is to stop them from just saying no to this trigger and prosecuting you for it anyways, regardless of the law. Competition and high quality triggers are one of the gun related items I can justify spending a few hundred dollars on. Going from a less than mil-spec trigger that drags through gravel, to a two stage glass breaker will completely change a rifle from so-so to amazing.

That said, not sure if a novelty trigger is worth $380, might as well just train for speed and accuracy.

Probably operates on the same principle as the old BAFT (?) "Activator" that used to be at all the gun shows years back. Always had a video going of chicks in bikinis shooting AKs and ARs from the hip in what appeared to be full auto mode. I traded for a .22 auto years ago that had one on it- didn't work with that little recoil as I recall. Wonder if that thing is still floating around in a box of parts somewhere...

Regarding this new trigger mechanism, I was under the impression, perhaps wrongly, that the number of shots hitting the target were more important than the number of shots fired. Correct me if appropriate. Also, regarding the AR-15 type rifle, most magazine capacities top out at 30 rounds, and belt fed machine guns are more suitable for area fire, aren't they?

In CA, this wunder-trigger would empty a 10-rd mag in no time. Or be worthless on an AR pistol equipped with a KaliKey to make it CA legal.

Everything, literally everything in existence is a machine gun under the so-called BATFE's so-called interpretation of the completely invalid NFA and GCA. Belt loops and shoelaces leap to mind as examples of what mundane objects that drug gang says are machine guns under the supposed authority of those non-laws....

ATF reclassified a plastic stock as a machine gun even though the trigger still needs to be pulled for each round fired, so I don't see this being banned as much of a stretch. And given the SCOTUS refusal to rule in the face of multiple constitutional questions and violations, no chance of redress either.

This is where Trump screwed us. The bump stock was clearly not a machine gun, but Trump set the precedent of declaring it so via executive fiat. Now Biden can and will do the same thing in five minutes because Trump set the precedent and the republican party went right along with it without a fight. I think the ban on machine guns is unconstitutional, and that we should all be able to drop auto sears in our AR-15s without the need for taxes and registration. That said, I don't think it will be much of a reach for ATF to ban these under current interpretation of the law. The law basically states that a machine gun fires multiple rounds with one movement of the finger. The FRT-15 fires multiple rounds with one movement of the trigger – press and hold back the finger and the trigger mechanism pushes the trigger forward for reset against continuous pressure from the finger. Mechanically, it's not a whole lot different from an auto sear in operation.

I wish RBT luck, and hope they overcome the inevitable legal challenges!

Did you watch the video? Only one round is fired per function of the trigger (i.e. the trigger moves rearward for each shot fired).

Seriously, it's not a difficult concept, based on the wording of the NFA anyway.

Like others have said, that didn't stop the English Comprehension wizards at the ATF from actually reading the law as-written and de facto banning bumpstocks based on their feelz.

If the trigger must move between shots, it is not full auto, and I don't care who says it is. I have fired full auto, in singles and pairs, probably a couple thousand rounds of 5.56 and .50 BMG. The trigger does not move. That is a technical question, an equivalent legal question would be "how can you ignore the Second Amendment and go after silliness concerning how the action works, when any such question is illegal to the point of being nonsensical?"

Darkman,

While "fast" rates of fire could often be wasteful/unproductive, there are situations where your survival literally depends on your ability to achieve a "fast" rate of fire. One such situation would be several attackers (armed with firearms) in a fairly tight group suddenly rushing toward you at close range.

Point of order, while the sear surface does seem much smaller than a standard AR trigger (likely to accommodate the thickness of the cassette bottom), excess wear would not cause the gun to go full auto. Without the sear holding onto the trigger and lacking a traditional disconnect, the hammer would simply follow the bolt home. Hammer follow 99% of the time results in nothing more than a dead trigger, as the hammer sliding against the bolt carrier spreads the force out over too long a time span and robs the hammer of the impulse necessary to ignite the primer.

That said, between the precedence of the Akins Accelerator and the bump glove, I don't think this will stay "non-NFA" for very long, and I also don't see it gaining a lot of appeal as there appears to be no way to "turn it off" and revert to a traditional semi-auto trigger pull. This is less DIAS and more Lightning Link territory.

They are in Orlando, which leads me to the silly FL law that was passed about "bump stocks" which really covers a lot more than that. Their lawyer must be pretty confident that it is legal in FL. That being said, cash would be the only way to go in this situation. You definitely don't want to be on their customer list when the law comes a calling.

It's not a matter of if the ATF makes the determination that this is illegal it's a matter of when. But then again it is not a matter of when Biden bans The ownership of semi automatic rifles with mandatory turn in and door to door confiscation with the execution without trial of all gun owners who resist that will then say followed by the declaration that the confiscation and execution of every single gun owner is constitutional by SCOTUS it's a matter of when.

It's a fun switch! While it may be functional, full auto is utterly worthless as far as practicality and efficiency. Sure it would be super neat if you have the gobs of expendable ammo and you want to go to the range and have everyone come look at you and exclaim that you're going to jail and yadda yadda. I don't have to get wordy here as everyone can close their eyes and imagine going to the range and letting loose with what appears as full-auto fire, especially with a drum magazine. Don't forget to show up to the range in a bright yellow or red Corvette also.

They're easy to get. The only difference is the back ledge isn't machined back as far, so it'll catch on an auto sear or this trigger mechanism. I also wonder if this will help Ceiner-type .22 bolt conversions. They can experience bolt bounce in rapid fire, which causes a stoppage.

I wonder how difficult it is to fire off just one round at a time, or is it even possible? Does a quick 'touch and release' of the trigger result in an inadvertent double-tap every time?
I could very much be interested if it's not difficult to pop off single rounds without accidentally going 'full semi-auto' constantly. 😊

This is cleaner than the version from 2015, but continual fire with a constant pressure has already been addressed

- On April 13, 2015, ATF issued a classification letter regarding a device characterized as a "positive reset trigger," designed to be used on a semiautomatic AR-style rifle. The device consisted of a support/stock, secondary trigger, secondary trigger link, pivot toggle, shuttle link, and shuttle. ATF determined that, after a single pull of the trigger, the device utilized recoil energy generated from firing a projectile to fire a subsequent projectile. ATF noted that "a 'single function of the trigger' is a single pull," and that the device utilized a "single function of the trigger" because the shooter need not release the trigger to fire a subsequent projectile, and instead "can maintain constant pressure through a single function of the trigger."

Ingenious concept!

CONS:

Trigger was not submitted to ATF for determination of legality.

Just trusting "his" attorney for legality.

ATF used creative verbiage to reclassify bump stocks as machine guns, I suspect this will be the same outcome.

$400

PROS:

Seems to function better than traditional bump fire, binary triggers.

$600 stimulus payment on the way!

I love reading all the comments re: this latest wonder trigger. I foolishly bought the Franklin binary some years ago. It now resides in a junk drawer as I could not make it function reliably even after multiple buffer/spring changes. I assisted with the installation of the RB FRT-15 from start to finish and took it for a ride. The only adjustment made was to a H-4 buffer which did slow the cycle a bit, but made it totally reliable. SBR's seem to behave a bit differently than the 16" rifles. The "single pull single shot" is a completely choose able function. One has to time the trigger with the bolt follow though in order to achieve an acceptable and manageable rate of fire. An adjustable gas block would be a good investment. The test rifle now has an rpm of abt 400, or about the same as a Thompson.- easily sped up with tuning the buffer and spring. How much time and money and ammunition do you have?- neat toy, but semi automatic by any definition, BUT- remember- it is not a free country, and it's run by people who don't know the difference between an AR-14 and an AR-15 (sic)

The Franklin binary works just fine on an AR pistol – using their supplied spring and standard buffer – depending on how short your barrel, you might need to adjust the gas block

I'm no rocket surgeon – but when you build an AR pistol, you add buffer weight to slow down the BCG because the gas pressure at the gas block is far higher because it's closer to the breech and doesn't have the expansion of a carbine barrel location. IMO adding 2.4 ounces (a stack of 10 quarters of weight) to a buffer tube that's already 3 ounces is BS. And only serves to slow the BCG way down. The smoke and mirrors is finding someone who can pull the trigger really fast for those who will believe it's actually faster. Not too much harder to do since they've lightened their trigger from the stock AR-15 trigger pull of 7-8 lbs down to 5lbs. This trigger at $380 is a joke.

I have an SSA-E adjusted to a total all in @2lbs – titanium BCG, and an H2 buffer on an AR-15 pistol. It's fast as sh1t. Spend the money on an SSA-E

I wish this were legal at the state level.

This attorney seems kind of deceptive with his statements. Says he's an attorney who's worked in the industry for 40yrs, but he's only been an attorney for less than 20yrs. Was he a janitor, was he an IT person, was he in HR? He hammers the issue that the FRT isn't a full auto or "machine gun", duh. But it appears that FRT likely violates Florida's "bump stock" law. Florida's bump stock laws is so ambiguous that it appears to regulate (make illegal) binary triggers and the FRT.

The attorney should've stuck with his guns and kept saying legally federally....not a machine gun because at 10:34 he says it's a fully legal drop in trigger (without qualification), but Florida's bump stock statute (below) seems to disagree with that assertion.

790.222 Bump-fire stocks prohibited.—A person may not import into this state or transfer, distribute, sell, keep for sale, offer for sale, possess, or give to another person a bump-fire stock. A person who violates this section commits a felony of the third degree, punishable as provided in s. 775.082, s. 775.083, or s. 775.084. As used in this section, the term "bump-fire stock" means a conversion kit, a tool, an accessory, or a device used to alter the rate of fire of a firearm to mimic automatic weapon fire or which is used to increase the rate of fire to a faster rate than is possible for a person to fire such semiautomatic firearm unassisted by a kit, a tool, an accessory, or a device.

All that said...I'll take 3!

This is nothing more of a logical extension/evolution of the TacCon "assisted reset" trigger. Without actually shooting one I don't think I'm qualified to make a call either way as to the relative ease or desire that Rare Breed will come under the scrutiny and crosshairs of the DemocRat control freaks.

However, it'd be hard to imagine with a device that toes the line of legality so incredibly close, that Rare Breed went to market without obtaining a determination letter from the "gods" at BATF...

Rare Breed Showcasing Non-NFA FRT-15 Forced Reset Trigger

Exhibit 13

Rare Breed Firearms and Rare Breed Triggers are showing off their new trigger for AR-pattern firearms, the FRT-15, or Forced Reset Trigger. The FRT-15 uses energy from the bolt to reset the trigger forward, allowing rapid, but not automatic fire.

According to Rare Breed the FRT-15 is not subject to regulation under the National Firearms Act, or NFA, since it requires the shooter to pull the trigger for every round fired.

And they do fire quickly. From these introductory videos it's clear that this is a speedy system, using the mechanical advantage to give the shooter Jerry Miculek-style powers.

Whether or not fast shooting is practical is a matter of debate, but it is fun and a real head-turner at the range. Plus these triggers are a whole lot cheaper and more plentiful compared to actual automatic arms, which are expensive and extremely tightly regulated.

At $380, the Rare Breed FRT-15 isn't inexpensive but in-line with other premium and boutique trigger systems. The FRT-15 is a drop in cassette-style trigger, although Rare Breed suggests gunsmith installation.

Rare Breed Triggers FRT - Action

Not included with, but required components include an H3 or similar heavy buffer or comparable recoil assembly and a full-auto-rated bolt carrier group. Designed for AR-pattern firearms, the FRT-15 may not work with other guns that use AR trigger systems, owing to how it interacts with the bolt carrier.

sion- and wear-resistance and added lubricity. The trigger pull is rated at a pretty standard 5 pounds.

Theirs is not the first trigger of this kind. Other companies have produced trigger systems that tap the action of the host firearm to assist the trigger's reset without falling under the umbrella of the NFA, such as the Tac-Con trigger system.

Similarly, other companies have manufactured binary trigger systems which are not regulated as NFA items, so in spirit, these triggers also aren't NFA-regulated.

The FRT-15 reset mechanism probably takes a little practice to use, and there's a chance that the forced reset may be uncomfortable for people with sensitive or "calibrated" trigger fingers, but it sure looks like a whole lot of fun, assuming you have the ammo to feed it.

This trigger pack requires a m16/m4 machine gun bolt carrier to function; possession of any m16/m4 machine gun bolt carrier, or trigger and hammer assembly component and the possession of an AR15 rifle or pistol is possession of an unregistered machine gun and a federal felony. Regardless if the m16/m4 parts are installed or not.

This type of possession charge will put you in the grey bar hotel for up to 10 years or on a long leash as an ATF informant to setup your friends, family, and other idiots who think their special op's material and really need a jam-o-matic.

You could not be more wrong about the M16 bolt-carrier group (BCG). Almost EVERY SINGLE AR-15 style rifle sold on the market today has a full-auto, M16 BCG installed. It is also 100% LEGAL to own a full-auto AR trigger system. The issue with an AR is the third hole, and whether or not that is drilled out of an unregistered lower receiver.

Stop spreading misinformation please.

This is not a new concept. There was a similar modification for 1911 pistols over 50 years ago.

Want to stop all the non-sense, repeal the NFA. When the NFA was enacted there was no such thing as a Brady background check. Now that there is what is the purpose of the NFA? It's supposed to be a tax, that's the loophole congress used to enact it. A tax is supposed to generate revenue. NFA has never generated revenue, it has always cost more to administer it than was collected. They lose millions of dollars every year trying to administer it.

It's used as an add-on charge when used by criminals.....which no longer matters as the presence of any firearm in a crime now has the same additional penalty.

It's time for the NFA to go away.

Could it cut down more people in a crowd (which we are not gathering in these days) than "normal" semi auto fire? Maybe.... I could see it being relative as a means of dispersing a riotous group (blocking your passage or attacking your vehicle) What it definitely can't do is turn a law abiding citizen into a lawless felon; only the ATF and ignorant politicians can do that.

LOL – Right? That statute is so intentionally vague – I’m not sure if it’s actually been used.

790.222: As used in this section, the term “bump-fire stock” means a conversion kit, a tool, an accessory, or a device used to alter the rate of fire of a firearm to mimic automatic weapon fire or which is used to increase the rate of fire to a faster rate than is possible for a person to fire such semiautomatic firearm unassisted by a kit, a tool, an accessory, or a device.

Jerry Miculek’s finger is illegal in Florida too in that case.

I wonder if this thing utilizes the “3rd position” on the selector? My Franklins do this – and it’s always FUN to flick my MPX into binary. I have “over-run” the bolt with it though. It seems like this device, relying on the bolt to do the reset, would eliminate that issue. They are similarly priced (and similarly UNAVAILABLE). Though I do have 2 NIB Franklins on my shelf with nothing I really feel like putting them into.

Also – being a solid drop-in – they won’t run into “broken pin issues” when you use them in piston/fast bolt guns like the MPX/MCX – though I’m not sure they’ll run in an unmodified bolt (and I’m not sure if the SA bolt in the sigs are the same as the FA bolts)...

No that does not make the weapon an NFA item. FA bolt carriers are not NFA. On putting in a truly select-fire trigger and then, of course a FA bolt to make that trigger work, would case an NFA issue. But the FA BCG, in and of itself, is not controlled. This trigger is not classified as a select-fire trigger because it has to be pulled for each shot to fire.

There are binary fire systems for AK platforms. I've stayed away from them because, unlike the Franklin AR one – you have to HOLD the trigger, strip the mag, and empty the chamber in an AK if you don't want to fire the second shot. AR style triggers, you move the selector to semi/safe and not send the 2nd round downrange.

AK style FCG's are a completely different design from AR's. The ALG trigger is a nice replacement for a crappy factory trigger, but won't replicate the fire rate of this device.

Exhibit 13

Very True. But what everyone needs to realize and stop denying, is that the government that we live under, and have for at minimum of one century, is tyrannical according to the founders of said country.

Tyrants do not allow things that they don't like. So it has nothing to do with "is it LEGAL or not" All despots, tyrants, dictators and every other evil form of government, make the laws and change them for the benefit or their agendas, NOT for your safety! This is the lie that so many still believe. That laws enacted by government are FOR YOUR GOOD.

Those who worry about which gun law is legal or not are still worrying about a scratch when they have a terminal cancer. "THE RIGHT OF THE PEOPLE...SHALL NOT BE INFRINGED." Look up the word infringed in a Webster's 1898 dictionary (when the word was used as it was meant). No tyrants care nothing for what is wrong nor right they make the law FIT what they want it to fit. And do care at all if they themselves break the law. The question is: Why should any person obey when they know it is morally wrong to do so and. If one doesn't know how to tell what is morally right or not, they must get some help.

It MAY be true for a short time after a government is established, that they will set up a law for societal good, but it certainly is NOT true now for us in the USSA. The constitution (the legal construct) has been broken by the government, so many times it cannot be counted. The Bill of Rights which was supposed to keep said government from doing such things has not a single element that has not been blatantly broken (read that as: OUR GOVERNMENT IS ILLEGAL AND A CRIMINAL AND WE HAVE NOT DONE ANYTHING TO BRING IT TO JUSTICE).

Now go ahead and vote! That's our recourse, right? How's that working out for us? We FINALLY have to admit that voting is completely corrupt in a corrupt USSA. Unless of course a person is one of those irresponsible citizens that has not watched all the evidence presented and simply believed the propaganda saying there is no evidence of vote fraud. There's no hope for this person anyway. Every one else needs to overcome their normalcy bias and consciously admit that there is no just rule of law in this country and then act as their conscience tells them as a responsible human being.

Don't get me wrong, it looks like a lot of fun! But, and this is a big but, I am not too sure that you can show this video to convince people that an AR is not an assault rifle...this is the kind of thing that will get my guns taken away!

Why is it that people such as you STILL haven't figured out that NO AMOUNT of 'convincing' is ever gonna be enough to stop those who are anti gun????

They don't care what the real facts are, they just don't want you to have guns!!!!!!

And it wouldn't stop with AR's, they just don't want us to have guns!!!!

John, Some day soon your going to have to give your rights up or fight for them. I know I have thought many times about this since the election, and I am going to stand. I can't live life with out liberty.

As for the new contraption, you can use a heavy rubber band with out having to by a new carrier etc. and you can do it for free. Look at Y-tube, there are still one or two that show how to do it from the shoulder instead of the belt and get more than enough rds. accurately enough to confuse the enemy.

I think my trigger finger is pretty calibrated to something like this from years of playing paintball with a response trigger. Basically a piston that resets the trigger that taps off the gas from shooting, they can run pretty quick with some practice Depends on if the bolt in the MCX is the same as in their select fire version.

Shoot – now you’re going to make me go look...

OK (since we can’t post pics here) – the BCG in my MCX is WAY SHORTER than the regular AR/M4 bolt carrier. The requirement for a FA BCG is the difference in the “cutout” on the underside of the bolt, that is used to trip the (secondary) sear in a select fire AR platform.

Since the Sig MC/MP platforms are gas piston (vs direct impingement) with an integral spring assembly (versus the “tail” that goes into the buffer tube), and is much shorter (and lacks the “lug” on an AR/M4 BCG that resets this trigger group) – I’m gonna give that a HARD NO IMHO. There are also SIGNIFICANT DIFFERENCES between the MCX FA bolt carrier – and you likely cannot even find one.

For a system that’s supposed to be modular – Sig REALLY SCREWED US on parts availability. I’m looking to get rid of my MCX – because I cannot find a conversion kit to 5.56 (which would make it more affordable to shoot).

A Franklin Binary WILL WORK (works on my MPX) – but you need to replace the roll pins with solid steel pins – because the faster/harder action of the bolt breaks trigger pins (ask me how I know).

But a call/email to Rare Breed should answer the question more definitely. I’m 99.9% sure the answer is going to be NO.

OTOH – Who wants to waste EXPENSIVE 300BL in select-fire mode anyways? Still looking for a buyer for mine.

Good question, but the article said “no”, as the trigger STILL requires one pull per shot. So the answer is “no”, which is not to say that it will not come under scrutiny and then suppression by our new overlords.

Nope, this trigger is 100% perfectly legal to install and use. It still requires a finger to pull the trigger for each and every shot fired, therefore it is still a semi-auto weapon. And don’t listen to Buurga, as it sounds like he’s just another libocrat!

Ron,

Attached is the original US Patent #10514223, and the evaluation letter#307385 on at least the 1st generation of this device by the inventor.

This device was classified as a combination of parts designed and intended to convert a weapon into a machinegun, and therefore a "machinegun" under the NFA.

We don't have any to actually classify or the ability to procure one. David Smith was also working on this, I believe he found a patent or report that may be helpful.

In my opinion, these are going to be classified as MGs once examined.

Is there anything you want us to include in the report? I will most likely use a lot of the language from the examination back in 2018. I will also include that based on your review from the blueprints, pictures and video, FATD believes it appears to be a machinegun BUT FATD will physically need to examine the

Ron,

Attached is the original US Patent #10514223, and the evaluation letter#307385 on at least the 1st generation of this device by the inventor. This device was classified as a combination of parts designed and intended to convert a weapon into a machinegun, and therefore a "machinegun" under the NFA.

Rob,

We don't have any to actually classify or the ability to procure one. David Smith was also working on this, I believe he found a patent or report that may be helpful.

In my opinion, these are going to be classified as MGs once examined.

Good morning,

Have you guys received the FRT-15 Rare Breed Trigger yet for determination? We received a few tips from citizens so far. If so, we can move forward and write a lead.

Rob,
It will likely be a machinegun, but we need one for classification.

Daniel,

Will these triggers be classified as an NFA item? I found a thread on them on 4Chan.org.
